EMPLOYMENT CHECKLIST

Experience has shown that many applicants, for the emergency telecommunicator position, consider only certain aspects of the job while ignoring less attractive features. As a result, when new employees encounter negative job features, they sometimes react by leaving the job before training is completed or within a few months of qualification.

While there are many satisfying, rewarding aspects of the telecommunicator position, and there is no question that emergency telecommunicators make significant contributions to the welfare and safety of their fellow citizens, it is important for all applicants to carefully consider both the negative and the positive features of a new career before considering the position.

The job factors listed below are features of the emergency telecommunicator position, about which many applicants are unaware. If you are concerned about any of these items, you may discuss the concerns with the Director.

This questionnaire should be taken home, considered carefully and, if pertinent, discussed with your family or whomever else you feel is important. Should you be successful in passing all the phases in the testing process, and are offered a position, you will be given a new form and asked to sign each line. The form will then become part of your permanent personnel folder.
